

the learning circle of experience

Kurt Lewin's model of experiential learning

note the particular importance of here-and-now concrete experience in generating and testing out ideas, and also the importance of the feedback loop in checking whether one is really on track; ineffectiveness is often due to an imbalance between active experience and reflective observation